

Results for: 112 Ariz. 509, 543 P.2d 1138 (1975)

| Actions ▾

View references to 112 Ariz. 509, 543 P.2d 1138 \(1975\)

Cases

1

Narrow By

▶ Filter Results

Cases (1)

Sort by: Relevance ▾

1. ▲ State v. Sardo, 112 Ariz. 509

Overview: Contraband seized during a warrantless search of a motor vehicle was admissible because there was probable cause to believe that the vehicle contained contraband and exigent circumstances that justified the search.

Appellants waived jury trial and submitted the issue of guilt to the trial court on a stipulated record. Appellants were convicted of possession of marijuana for sale and sought review. Acting on an informant's tip regarding a drug shipment from Mexico , the officers located the "load car" and kept it under surveillance. Appellants were observed interacting with the car and were arrested after the officers discovered marijuana during a warrantless search of their motor home. Appellants claimed that the case should be remanded for a voluntariness hearing and that the search violated their Fourth Amendment rights ...

Get It Now! for $23

Jurisdiction

Arizona

Court

Arizona Supreme Court

Date

Dec 19, 1975

